

Administrative Release No. 13

Subject: Tax Status of Interest Received From Federal, State and Local Obligations

I. General

This release provides guidance to determine whether interest from certain obligations is taxable in Maryland.

II. Federal obligations

A. Under federal law the State of Maryland is precluded from taxing interest received from obligations of the United States.

B. While it is clear that interest from United States obligations is not taxable by Maryland, there are many obligations issued under various designations which do not clearly indicate whether they are United States obligations. Interest, for example, received from mortgage participation certificates issued by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation (FHLMC) is not tax exempt even though it would appear to fall within the term "federal obligation." Other examples of more commonly known obligations are provided in this release. It should, however, be stressed that this release does not provide an exhaustive listing of all obligations. If an obligation is not referred to in this release, the burden will be upon the taxpayer to show that the obligation is an obligation of the United States.

C. Maryland does not tax interest, dividends, or profit realized from the sale or exchange of United States obligations. Because interest, dividends, and any profit realized from the sale or exchange of United States obligations is included in federal adjusted gross income, or federal taxable income in the case of a corporation, a subtraction modification is provided.

The subtraction modification for profit realized on the sale or exchange of United States obligations is equal to the amount of all realized profits. Losses on the sale or exchange of United States obligations are not netted against profits in calculating the amount of the subtraction.

III. State and local obligations

A. Maryland does not tax interest or dividends on obligations or securities of the State of Maryland or any of its political subdivisions. Maryland also does not tax any profit realized from the sale or exchange of bonds issued by this State or its political subdivisions. This exclusion from income does not include any profit realized from the sale or exchange of shares in a mutual fund that holds bonds issued by this State or its political subdivisions. (Refer to Administrative Release No. 5.) Because any profit received from the sale or exchange of State or local obligations is included in federal adjusted gross income, or federal taxable income in the case of a corporation, appropriate subtraction modifications are provided by law. With regard to interest or dividends received from this State or political subdivisions, because such interest or dividends are not included in federal adjusted gross income or taxable income, no subtraction modification is needed.

B. Interest or dividends on obligations or other securities of a state or political subdivision of a state other than Maryland are taxable by Maryland. Any profit realized from the sale or exchange of bonds issued by a state or political subdivision of a state other than Maryland is taxable by Maryland. Because profit realized on such sale is already included in federal adjusted gross income, no addition modification is required for the profit realized. Interest and dividends earned on obligations of a state or political subdivision other than Maryland must be added to federal adjusted gross income.

C. Generally, there are very few problems with identifying state or local obligations. However, based upon a number of inquiries, several issues should be mentioned. In the case of District of Columbia Bonds, prior to 1975 and the advent of Home Rule, they were considered obligations of the United States and accorded tax-exempt status by Maryland. Bonds issued by the District of Columbia after the advent of Home Rule are accorded the same status as bonds issued by any other state and are subject to Maryland tax on an individual's or corporation's return filed with Maryland. Interest from Washington Metropolitan Transit Authority Bonds (METRO) and Washington Suburban Sanitary Bonds is not subject to tax under a specific provision of the Maryland Code.

D. Taxpayers who receive interest from regulated investment companies (mutual funds) which invest in municipal bonds, state and local, should refer to Administrative Release No. 5.
